LATE LAST NIGHT, I was trying to figure out what was wrong with the game, which was then troubling me quite a lot. It turned out to be not the game that's wrong, but myself... I'd always been against empathy because it was disruptive and pointless, because no one wanted others to feel bad for them unless they were in good shape themselves. Then last night, I started thinking about what the empathy was in the game. It was the rush you felt when you used the diplomacy skill against someone in your party, because your character cared about them and, above all, about the choices they'd make. When you set the diplomacy skill to 3, you could literally talk a person into joining you out of fear or anger, or even out of sheer stupidity. It was pure immersion, letting you feel and react in a totally different way than you would normally, which is such an awesome gameplay mechanic. I was stuck in my way of thinking, sure that empathy was a good thing, but that it should be forced, and that if someone didn't want to feel empathy, they should do a good job in becoming a character that didn't feel empathy. A game that didn't let you be treated like a bad person or be treated like someone who can't care about others, and that cared about you as a person to make you stop being a bad person... that was definitely a system I couldn't get past. But I thought about how a casual system works, and I don't think it's what this game is about. I'm glad I realized that just when I started to change my mind as I played the game. I remember at one point, when I was about to beat the level, thinking "I'm going to beat this game!" and being really afraid that I'd fall before I could even enjoy it. But all I had to do was play. I'd be so embarrassed because I'd been in a bad mood, but playing the game forced me to be in a good mood and think about what I wanted to do for the next time I play the game. And at some point when I was still in a bad mood, I took a breather to celebrate my victory, and I decided I was going to replay that level, but this time I was going to focus more on what I was doing. I stopped myself to think about why that level was challenging for me, and I was able to find out that it was forcing me to think about my own choices as a player, and what bff6bb2d33

Genome sequence of Cyanotheca 51142, a new species from an oxygen minimum zone of the North Sea. Thermophilic and phototrophic cyanobacteria of the genera Synechococcus, Calothrix and Prosthecochloris have been shown to be abundant members of the microbial community in the oxygen minimum zone (OMZ) of the North Sea. Whether this extends to the genus Cyanotheca and the lineage leading to it is not yet known. During a seabed survey of the deep-sea OMZ on the Norwegian continental shelf, a sample containing the presence of both photosynthetic and phototrophic microorganisms was obtained from the water column of the June-July 2006 cruise. PCR amplification based on 16S rRNA gene sequencing and phylogenetic analysis indicated the presence of a completely novel lineage within genus Cyanotheca. Molecular and morphological investigations performed subsequently indicated that the seabed sample contained a novel species, Cyanotheca 51142. The genome of the isolate Cyanotheca 51142 represents a small circular chromosome of 2.88 Mb and one of the smallest of free-living cyanobacterial chromosome sequences to date. Its unique and ecologically important properties merit special reference: an efficient photosynthetic apparatus that makes water-soluble tetrahydroxyl ptaersypate available, a heterocystous flagellated axis with several non-motile bacteriorhodopsins of unusual spectral characteristics, and a possible association with thermophilic archaea.// // Generated by class-dump 3.5 (64 bit). // // class-dump is Copyright (C) 1997-1998, 2000-2001, 2004-2015 by Steve Nygard. // #import @interface NSData (AVExtendedData) + (id) NSArrayCreateWithAllocator:(id) arg1 data:(id) arg2 size:(unsigned

Auburn University Athletic Director Jay Jacobs is a "favored" candidate to become the next president of the NCAA, according to a report from CBS Sports. CBS reported on the report in the early hours of Saturday morning by the College Football Playoff executive committee. Jacobs told CBS he has not heard from the NCAA or the committee and is "not even considering it." When asked by the network if he was an acceptable candidate for the vacancy, Jacobs replied that he believes the position will be filled with an "obvious" choice. Last year, Jacobs was appointed as interim athletic director when he was named interim athletic director, causing controversy because of his close relationship with Auburn football coach Gus Malzahn. The other candidates for the vacancy are Mike Bobinski (NCAA vice president of men's basketball), Steven Nitchkin (ACC senior vice president of administration and finance), Jim Delany (Big Ten associate commissioner), and Joe Nittany (Athletic director of Penn State). The members of the executive committee will be finalizing their list of final candidates by the end of this week. When reached by AuburnSports.com, Jacobs said he would "not talk about who's not running." If Jacobs were to be hired by the NCAA to replace David Roberts, he would replace a president at a time when the NCAA is concerned about corruption and ethics compliance.
